

Seeing Ability in others.....

This year (2015) I unconditionally took somebody under my wings, to coach them through their life's journey. I allowed a stranger, a truly gifted and special person, to enter my life and expose their vulnerabilities, wishes and dreams..... and they did!

It has been an incredible journey!

I look back to the day we had our first coaching session early this year with pride and deep gratitude.

I am proud of how my Coachee has grown in confidence. I am inspired by her creativity, ambition and wisdom. Most of all, I am proud of the person she is becoming. I am even touched by the fact that through our coaching we have even unearthed the Author within her, and she is currently working on her first book.

However, with all the above truly inspiring developments, I look towards 2016 with some anxiety for my Coachee.

She is a person living with Disability; a Graduate and Unemployed!

I know she deserves much better. I also know that she can offer immense value to any open-minded, caring and visionary employer out there. She has great communication and interpersonal skills. She is a truly a great person to know and to work with.

She is based in KZN, but would be willing to relocate for any worthwhile opportunity.

I would like to hear from employers or from anyone who can assist, so we could offer my Coachee the dignity and hope that she deserves. If you are able to help or know of someone who could, please email me at shoni@potentialexponents.com.

You are welcome to view a 6-minute video clip below "Intertwined with Disability", which also does include some brief background regarding my Coachee.

<http://www.potentialexponents.com/speaker/shoni-khangalas-topics/shoni-khangalas-awesome-inspirational-talks/>

Shoni Khangala – Certified Inner Life Skills Master Coach and Licensed ILS Master Trainer

Founder and CEO: Potential Exponents

www.potentialexponents.com

"The ultimate Disability in the Inability to see Ability in others". – Unknown